HUSTINGS COURT.

Case of the Anheuser-Busch Company vs. Nicholas & Woodward on Trial.

In the Hustings Court yesterday the case of the Anheuser-Busch Brewing Company vs. Nicholas & Woodward was begun. The plaintiff brought suit for about $4,700 alleged to be due them. There is no dispute as to the amount, but the controversy grew out of what was known in this city about two years ago as the beer war. About the time the Virginia Brewery was opened, the Anheuser-Busch Company undertook to break them down by underselling them, and reduced the price of beer from $9 to $4 per barrel.

Nicholas & Woodward were the agents for the Anheuser-Busch Company and sold the beer at the same rate it was put to them. The defendants claim that the Anheuser-Busch Company in consideration that they carried on the fight against the Virginia Brewing Company would be reimbursed for all their trouble and expenses and losses.

The war lasted about eleven months and the defendants claim an offset of about $3,600. The plaintiff denies the contract as stated by Nicholas & Woodward. The case will be concluded this morning. Smith and King represent the plaintiffs and Penn & Cocke and T. W. Miller the defense.

To-day the case of McClure & Ainsler vs. the Roanoke Iron Company will be called. McClure & Ainsler were the contractors who erected the furnace, after which they filed a mechanic's lien to secure them for between $28,000 and $30,000 which they alleged was due them. The company claimed that the work was not done according to contract, and that the contractors did not have it completed at the time specified and that the damage they sustained would more than cover the amount they owed the contractors. The case is one of great importance, and a large number of witnesses are in the city from Pittsburgh. Scott & Staples represent the plaintiff, and Watts, Robertson & Robertson and R. G. H. Kean, of Lynchburg, the defendants.
